Artificial Intelligence and Sustainability: Shaping the Future of Türkiye's Contract Business Sector

The convergence of artificial intelligence (AI) and sustainability is reshaping industries worldwide, and Türkiye's contract business sector is no exception. This dynamic sector, encompassing textiles, carpets, marble, furniture, and more, is poised to undergo a transformative journey, driven by technological innovation and a growing global consciousness for environmental responsibility.

AI is revolutionizing the contract business in several ways. AI-powered design tools accelerate the design process, generate innovative product concepts, and optimize material usage. By analyzing consumer preferences, market trends, and historical data, AI helps designers develop products that resonate with the target audience.

In production, AI optimizes processes by predicting demand, scheduling production runs efficiently, and minimizing downtime. Machine learning algorithms analyze real-time data to identify potential issues and optimize performance. AI-powered vision systems inspect products for defects, ensuring consistent quality and reducing the risk of recalls. This automation improves efficiency and reduces labor costs.

AI also streamlines supply chain operations by optimizing logistics, reducing lead times, and minimizing inventory costs. Predictive analytics forecasts demand and supply fluctuations, enabling businesses to proactively adjust their supply chain strategies.

Sustainability is a paramount driver of innovation for businesses operating in the global market. Türkiye's contract business sector can harness the power of AI to achieve its sustainability goals: In terms of resource efficiency; AI will identify opportunities to reduce energy consumption, water usage, and material waste. By analyzing production data and optimizing processes, businesses will significantly diminish their environmental footprint.

For Circular Economy, AI will facilitate the transition to a circular economy by enabling the tracking and tracing of materials, optimizing recycling processes, and identifying opportunities for reuse and repurposing.

On the Sustainable Material Sourcing issue AI-powered tools will assist businesses in identifying sustainable suppliers and ensuring the ethical sourcing of materials. By analyzing supplier performance data and environmental impact assessments, businesses will make informed decisions about their sourcing strategies.

The future of Türkiye's contract business sector is promising. As AI advances and sustainability becomes a global priority, Turkish businesses will differentiate themselves in the global market by offering innovative, high-quality, and sustainable products. This will appeal to a growing segment of consumers who prioritize ethical and environmentally friendly products.

PINAR TAŞDELEN ENGİN
President, Uludağ Textile Exporters' Association

By embracing these technologies and adopting sustainable practices, Turkish businesses will explore emerging markets and niche segments that demand sustainable and innovative solutions. Additionally, investing in training and development programs will equip employees with the skills needed to thrive in the digital age.

Ultimately, by harnessing the power of AI and sustainability, Türkiye's Contract Business sector will flourish in the 21st century.

The Color of 2025: Gold

Gold color will be an inspiration element in 2025 according to Color Expert Ayşe Aysen Bulut. Every year is characterized by a unique color. Bulut has recently announced that the color of 2025 will be gold. This choice stands out as both an aesthetically pleasing and deeply meaningful decision. Gold symbolizes wealth, light, and wisdom in cultural and artistic contexts, set to inspire the year 2025.

Bulut explains, “Gold is widely recognized as a symbol of power, success, and prosperity across many cultures. From a psychological perspective, gold represents confidence, inner wisdom, and elegance. Its brilliance signifies enlightenment, clarity, and life energy. The year 2025 will mark a period of enlightenment, empowerment, and growth at both societal and individual levels.”

Ayşe Ayşen Bulut also emphasizes the spiritual impact of 2025.

“Gold will guide us on a journey of discovering our inner richness, fostering deeper self-love, and achieving spiritual transformation. This year will highlight themes of personal development, self-confidence, and seizing opportunities,” she said.

Adding Gold Details to Homes Will Generate Positive Energy

Bulut notes, “Gold will also hold a significant place in aesthetic fields. In architecture, interior design, and textiles, gold accents will evoke luxury and elegance, adding depth to living spaces. Gold will be frequently chosen in lighting and decorative elements to generate a warm and inviting atmosphere.”

Gold Tones in Energy Therapies Will Gain Importance

“The year 2025 presents a powerful opportunity to discover our inner treasures through the illuminating energy of gold,” said Bulut. “Individuals will have the chance to find their own shine and reflect it onto the world. Gold will serve as an inspiring symbol for spiritual healing and transformation. In 2025, we will recognize our talents and nurture our inner strength. Gold will guide us toward uncovering our inner wealth and loving ourselves more deeply. The use of gold tones in spiritual healing practices and energy therapies will become increasingly significant. With its healing frequency, gold will support the resolution of spiritual blockages and the achievement of inner balance.”

A New Era in the Textile Industry

Digital factories, renewable energy solutions, and smart quality control systems are ushering in a transformative era for the textile industry. These innovations not only promote environmental sustainability but also bolster the sector's competitiveness. As their implementation becomes more widespread, they are set to shape the future of textile production.

A New Era in the Textile Industry

The textile industry is entering a transformative phase, driven by advancements in digital technologies, renewable energy, and smart quality control systems. These innovations are not only enhancing environmental sustainability but also strengthening the sector's competitiveness. As these practices gain wider adoption, they are expected to redefine the future of textile production.

Digital Factories: Boosting Efficiency and Speed

The emergence of digital factories is revolutionizing the textile industry by automating production processes and leveraging data analytics. With the integration of sensors and IoT (Internet of Things) technologies, manufacturers can monitor and optimize workflows in real time. This approach minimizes resource consumption, reduces waste, and significantly increases operational efficiency.

Renewable Energy: A Path to Sustainability

Renewable energy is playing a pivotal role in minimizing the environmental impact of textile manufacturing.

Factories increasingly rely on sustainable energy sources such as solar and wind power to meet their energy demands. By transitioning to renewable energy, many companies are reducing their carbon footprints while demonstrating a commitment to environmental responsibility.

Welcome to Greener World

POLYECO®

POLY - eco is an eco - friendly yarn, reducing raw material consumption by recycling used pet bottle and minimizing necessary energy and greenhouse gases in the manufacturing process.

Sustainability in the textile industry starts with raw materials. For this, it is necessary to focus on raw materials that cause the least damage to the environment, reduce emissions and minimize natural resource consumption. In addition, any improvement work that reduces the use of chemicals used in textiles is inevitable for improving sustainability.

OCEANLINE®

POLY-easy® is the brand name of yarns which can be dyed at a low temperature on 102°C . POLY-easy® is an eco friendly yarn due to its lower energy consumption and CO2 emission during a faster dyeing process compared to standard dyeing processes.

Ocean line is our one step coloring process spinning the filament. Dope-dyeing is a Sustainable Process to Dye Fibers Compared to Yarn-dyeing As a result of using less water and chemicals, we produce environmentally friendly colored polyester yarns. Unlike conventional dyeing, there is no need to use of water in mass Dope-dyeing is increasingly getting important with environmental motivations Adding color and functional masterbatches to melting polymer during the spinning production is an advantageous method in terms of both water consumption and reducing the carbon footprint impact.

Immersive textile design for hospitality and retail: Patricia Urquiola's “among-us” at Heimtextil 2025

Frankfurt am Main – For Heimtextil 2025, Patricia Urquiola presents among-us, a 650 m² design installation in the heart of Hall 12.0. The open-plan installation generates a welcoming atmosphere in which to experience textile concepts and to spark a conversation about design, sustainability and conviviality. Together with partners such as Kettal, Moroso, cc-tapis, Aquafil, Cimento® and Parà Tempotest, Urquiola has developed extraordinary spatial elements for among-us including double-sided hanging carpet structures, lounge islands and individually manufactured seating furniture.

In collaboration with selected partners of Patricia Urquiola, among-us offers visitors an immersive experience with optical and structural surprises including lounge islands by Kettal with fabrics by Kvadrat, hanging textiles by cc-tapis with a regenerated nylon yarn by Aquafil and seatings by Moroso. The hanging cement structures by Cimento® give the installation further architectural dimensions. Exhibitors at Heimtextil including Parà Tempotest are also among the sponsors of the fabrics. “The name among-us conveys a sense of conviviality and shared experiences something that happens ‘between us’ or ‘in our midst’. It also alludes to a line of small fungus-like toy creatures,” says Urquiola.

A grid-shaped carpet defines the installation. Within the grid, visitors encounter softly upholstered, anthropomorphic textile forms that invite to touch, relax and enable a sensory engagement with the materials. This approach highlights Urquiola's innovative take on materiality and combines conventional and unconventional elements to push the boundaries of textile design.

“Heimtextil is a perfect fit for us. It offers the opportunity to realize a two-way dialog that begins during the trade fair and continues throughout the year. We are not only addressing specialists, but everyone who is interested in textiles. Our approach is evolutionary and aims for comprehensive interaction. We want to listen as much as we present and value personal exchange,” Urquiola continues. Among-us is dedicated to sustainable materials, conviviality and the intersection of virtual and physical worlds - a space for exploration and discussion.

On Wednesday, January 15, Patricia Urquiola will participate in the Architonic Live Talk, and she will also deliver a mini-lecture, offering an exclusive glimpse into her creative world and unique design language.

Türkiye's First HYDE Hotel, designer by Yeşim Kozanlı Architecture, becomes an award hunter!

HYDE Hotel Bodrum, a perfect blend of modern luxury and dynamic energy designed in a "festival chic" concept by Yeşim Kozanlı Architecture, continues to shine in international design awards. With its sophisticated and bohemian interiors, the hotel has brought home two prestigious "Winner" awards from the German Design Awards and the European Property Awards, marking a significant achievement for Türkiye.

With over 25 years of experience designing accommodations for internationally accredited hotel chains across the globe, Yeşim Kozanlı Architecture has added another feather to its cap with HYDE Hotel Bodrum. The project has earned consecutive accolades at two of the world's most prestigious award platforms.

The German Design Awards jury, which annually honors visionary designs with future potential from innovative and sustainable projects worldwide, selected the HYDE Hotel Bodrum as a "Winner" this year. Following this success, Yeşim Kozanlı Architecture once again triumphed at the European Property Awards, where architectural and interior projects from global investors are evaluated, earning another "Winner" award for the HYDE Hotel Bodrum.

Funded by the Accor Hotels group and managed by London-based hospitality chain Ennismore, HYDE Hotel Bodrum is Türkiye's first hotel under the HYDE brand and the group's first adult-only luxury vacation destination. The hotel, designed by Yeşim Kozanlı Architecture, opened its doors in the summer of 2024. The design, a sophisticated and bohemian approach to the "festival chic" concept, perfectly combines modern luxury with dynamic energy.

Yeşim Kozanlı collaborated with Öznur Çağlayan Architecture as a design partner to generate a sophisticated atmosphere by incorporating works from artists in Türkiye and abroad. Vibrant colors and dynamic design elements are used throughout the spacious interiors to offer an inviting atmosphere.

The lobby of HYDE Hotel Bodrum captivates guests with its sculptural and spacious design from the moment they arrive. Filled with natural light and enriched with modern art pieces, the area offers a visual feast. High ceilings and expansive glass panels add an airy feel, while elegant furniture and artistic details emphasize prestige and luxury. This impressive space sets the stage for unforgettable moments.

The guest rooms blend simplicity and elegance, offering a peaceful retreat with the perfect balance of aesthetics and functionality. Every detail has been carefully considered to ensure comfort and tranquility. Bright and spacious, the rooms feature modern furniture and high-quality materials, with large windows that maximize natural light and provide uninterrupted views of the mesmerizing Mediterranean scenery. Accommodation options include standard rooms, luxurious suites with private pools, and villas designed for larger groups, all offering quick access to event and communal areas to keep guests immersed in the festival spirit.

HYDE Hotel Bodrum boasts four meticulously designed restaurants, each offering unique culinary experiences. The main restaurant, serving throughout the day, caters to diverse tastes with its extensive menu. La Rebelle, a French-style restaurant, enchants guests with its sophisticated atmosphere reminiscent of the heart of Paris. The 24-hour lobby bar provides a relaxing and social environment with its striking design, while the beach restaurant, overlooking the stunning Mediterranean, offers a broad range of delicious options. These spaces deliver a feast for both the palate and the eyes.

To reflect the festival spirit, Yeşim Kozanlı Architecture incorporated thoughtful touches into the event spaces.

The hotel also features serene yoga areas, a modern gym, tranquil spa facilities, and a private beach, blending contemporary designs with natural and artistic details to provide guests with a feel-good experience.

HYDE Hotel Bodrum's unique design, inspired by the region's natural beauty and cultural richness, embodies the spirit of a cultural club. By harmonizing these influences with modern touches, Yeşim Kozanlı Architecture has offered an unparalleled hotel experience.

Lenzing Emphasizes the Importance of Reading Labels

Lenzing is encouraging consumers to adopt the habit of reading product labels, making informed purchasing decisions, and avoiding overconsumption. By doing so, the company aims to raise awareness about supporting eco-friendly production processes and fostering sustainable choices.

Promoting societal awareness of conscious consumption is vital for building a more sustainable and livable world. Brands that prioritize environmentally friendly production methods are gaining recognition in this movement. The Lenzing Group, a leading supplier of regenerated cellulose fibers renowned for its responsible practices in the textile and nonwoven sectors, invites consumers to adopt eco-conscious habits and contribute to positive change.

The First Step: Reading Labels Mindfully

Paying close attention to the material and production information on product labels is a crucial starting point for sustainable shopping. Lenzing's textile fiber brand, TENCEL™ Lyocell, exemplifies this principle. Produced through a resource-efficient, closed-loop process, these fibers are certified by the EU Ecolabel, underscoring their reduced environmental impact and sustainable nature.

Encouraging Shared Responsibility

Avoiding unnecessary consumption is equally as important as making informed choices when shopping. This practice is a cornerstone of sustainable living, addressing the growing volume of waste generated by the textile industry each year. Lenzing calls on consumers to take shared responsibility for protecting the planet, ensuring that every step—from raw material selection to production methods—is conducted with meticulous care.

By fostering these habits, Lenzing seeks to inspire individuals to make meaningful contributions to sustainability, ensuring a greener future for generations to come.

TürkSMD 16th Architecture Awards announced

The Architecture Awards, given biennially by the Turkish Association of Independent Architects (TürkSMD), have been announced. The awards ceremony took place on October 4th, at the Sheraton Hotel in Ankara, where 12 awards across five categories were presented. The event was attended by the award winners, jury members, prominent figures in the profession, and all companies supporting the ceremony.

The evening began with an opening speech by TürkSMD President Ali Osman Öztürk, who discussed the history of the association and the award program. He summarized the projects and work carried out over the past two years and mentioned the formation of alliances with newly established associations of independent architects. Öztürk also highlighted that all these associations have united under one umbrella, forming the Federation of Independent Architects' Associations. He emphasized that this federation will enable independent architectural services to continue more effectively across the country with the establishment of associations in other cities. He thanked the jury members and all the supporting companies for their contributions to the awards and congratulated the winners on their success.

Prof. Dr. Namık Erkal, who chaired the jury for the 16th TürkSMD Awards, also gave a speech. He shared the criteria considered during the project evaluation and selection process, noting that architectural production outside of metropolitan areas stood out during this period. This demonstrated that there is a strong demand for quality architectural services not only in major cities but also in other regions of the country. Prof. Dr. Erkal added that architectural works outside the scope of building construction, such as conservation and urban design, were evaluated in the special jury award category and congratulated all the winners in each category.

The Museum Hotel Antakya, one of the symbols of rebirth in Antakya, started welcoming its guests

Since the day it first opened, The Museum Hotel Antakya has become one of the most iconic landmarks introducing Antakya to the world. To bring renewed hope to the city that suffered immense destruction from the February 6th earthquakes, the hotel reopened on September 26th. Listed as one of the "52 Places to Visit in the World" by The New York Times, the hotel's new mission will be "to bring life back to Antakya."

With the reopening of The Museum Hotel Antakya, following repair work and thorough technical inspections after the devastating February 2023 earthquakes, hopes have been rekindled in the heavily damaged city of Antakya. The hotel, which resumed operations on September 26th, aims to provide employment to the city and contribute once again to the region's social life and tourism.

Sabiha Asfuroğlu Abbasoğlu, CEO of Asfuroğlu Group's Tourism Investments, expressed that they went through a very difficult period after the February 6th earthquakes, saying, "We have never given up on Antakya since that day. After completing all structural and technical tests, we are experiencing the excitement of reopening The Museum Hotel Antakya. Reopening this place is not just about reopening a hotel; it means restarting life here, restarting commerce here, and reviving Antakya's tourism."

"We did not give up; we will not give up!"

Sabiha Asfuroğlu Abbasoğlu

emphasized that the revival of Antakya is not only the responsibility of Antakya or its residents but also of the entire country, stating, "We all need to fight for this. We did not give up; we will not give up! We started the Museum Hotel Antakya project in 2009, and the only reason we continued with faith was its contribution to Antakya, our country, and humanity. But now, we believe that the mission of The Museum Hotel Antakya will not only contribute to promoting Antakya but also symbolize the revival of life in Antakya. That's why we are inviting all of you here."

Hosting numerous archaeological artifacts, The Museum Hotel Antakya offers its guests a journey through time during their stay. Among the most important pieces in the hotel are the "World's largest single-piece floor mosaic" dating back to the 4th century AD, a Roman bath structure, the 2nd-century AD Pegasus mosaic, a street from the Roman period, and a wall structure from the Hellenistic period. Contract Textiles: Balancing durability, safety, and sustainability

Contract textiles have become the backbone of numerous industries, ranging from hospitality and healthcare to office spaces and public facilities. These specialized fabrics are designed to meet rigorous performance standards while providing aesthetic appeal and functional benefits. Their unique features, such as flame retardancy, enhanced durability, and sustainability, make them indispensable in commercial environments.

KEY FEATURES OF CONTRACT TEXTILES

1. Flame Retardancy: Safety First

One of the primary requirements of contract textiles is compliance with fire safety regulations. These fabrics are often treated with flame-retardant chemicals or produced using inherently flame-resistant fibers to reduce fire hazards. This feature is crucial for public spaces, such as hotels, theaters, and hospitals, where ensuring safety is non-negotiable.

2. Durability: Built to Last

Contract textiles endure heavy use and frequent cleaning, making durability a cornerstone of their design. High abrasion resistance, tear strength, and pilling resistance are key attributes that allow these textiles to maintain their integrity and appearance over time. The use of reinforced weaves, blended fibers, and advanced finishing technologies ensures that these fabrics can withstand the rigors of daily use in demanding environments.

3. Sustainability: Meeting Modern Demands

As sustainability becomes a global priority, contract textiles are adapting to meet eco-conscious standards. Manufacturers are increasingly using recycled materials, eco-friendly dyes, and low-impact production processes. Some textiles are even certified by organizations like OEKO-TEX® or Cradle to Cradle™, ensuring they meet stringent environmental and health criteria. Additionally, long-lasting fabrics contribute to sustainability by reducing waste and the need for frequent replacements.

4. Ease of Maintenance

Contract textiles are designed with practicality in mind. Many are treated to be stain-resistant, water-repellent, or antimicrobial, which makes them easier to clean and maintain. This feature is particularly valued in healthcare and hospitality sectors, where hygiene is paramount.

5. Aesthetic Versatility

Beyond functionality, contract textiles are crafted to enhance the visual appeal of a space. With a wide range of colors, patterns, and textures, they contribute to develop environments that are both professional and inviting. Customization options allow designers to align the textiles with specific branding or thematic requirements.

APPLICATIONS OF CONTRACT TEXTILES

1. Hospitality

From hotel draperies and upholstered furniture to bed linens and carpets, contract textiles in hospitality settings must combine elegance with resilience. Flame retardancy and easy maintenance are particularly critical in these high-traffic areas.

2. Healthcare

In hospitals and clinics, textiles play a vital role in maintaining cleanliness and preventing cross-contamination. Antimicrobial treatments and stain-resistant finishes are essential features of healthcare textiles, ensuring both functionality and patient safety.

3. Offices and Public Spaces

Office environments benefit from durable and acoustically efficient contract textiles, such as sound-absorbing panels and upholstery. Public spaces like theaters and auditoriums often use flame-retardant curtains and seat fabrics to prioritize safety without compromising on aesthetics.

The Future of Contract Textiles

The contract textiles industry is evolving rapidly to address changing market demands and technological advancements. Innovations like smart textiles, which can regulate temperature or provide real-time data on wear and tear, are expected to redefine the field. Additionally, the emphasis on circular economy principles will likely lead to increased use of biodegradable or fully recyclable materials.

In conclusion, contract textiles represent a harmonious blend of performance, safety, and sustainability. As industries continue to prioritize these qualities, these fabrics will remain integral to complete functional, attractive, and safe commercial spaces.

Foreign Investment Opportunities in Poland: A Gateway to Europe

Poland offers a compelling combination of strategic location, economic resilience, skilled talent, and a supportive business environment, making it an ideal destination for foreign investment.

As the country continues to innovate and expand its economic footprint, investors have the opportunity to be part of Poland's growth story while gaining access to one of the most dynamic markets in Europe.

Poland has emerged as one of the most attractive destinations for foreign investors in Europe. With its strategic location, robust economy, and investor-friendly policies, the country offers a dynamic environment for businesses looking to expand in the European market. This article delves into the key factors that make Poland a hotspot for foreign investment and highlights its unique advantages.

Strategic Location and Market Access

Situated at the crossroads of Western and Eastern Europe, Poland serves as a strategic gateway to the European Union (EU), one of the world's largest economic regions. Its central location provides businesses with seamless access to over 500 million EU consumers and connects major trade routes, including the Belt and Road Initiative. This geographic advantage is further amplified by Poland's well-developed transportation infrastructure, featuring modern highways, extensive rail networks, and international airports.

Economic Stability and Growth

Poland boasts one of the most resilient economies in Europe. Despite global economic challenges, the country has maintained consistent GDP growth, fueled by a diversified economic base. Key sectors such as manufacturing, technology, renewable energy, and real estate have shown significant growth, offering diverse opportunities for investors.

The Polish government has also demonstrated fiscal discipline, ensuring low inflation rates and stable monetary policies. As a member of the EU, Poland benefits from structural funds, which support infrastructure development and innovation projects, further enhancing its economic stability.

Skilled Workforce and Competitive Labor Costs

Poland is home to a highly educated and skilled workforce, with strong expertise in engineering, information technology, finance, and manufacturing. The country's universities and technical schools produce a steady stream of professionals fluent in multiple languages, including English, German, and Russian.

Moreover, Poland offers a competitive labor cost advantage compared to Western European countries, enabling businesses to optimize operational expenses without compromising quality. This combination of skill and affordability makes Poland a prime location for industries such as shared services, business process outsourcing (BPO), and research and development (R&D) centers.

Favorable Investment Climate

Poland ranks high in global ease-of-doing-business indices, thanks to its transparent legal framework, streamlined administrative processes, and tax incentives for foreign investors. The Polish Investment and Trade Agency (PAIH) actively supports international businesses by providing guidance on market entry, legal regulations, and available incentives.

Special Economic Zones (SEZs) across Poland offer attractive tax breaks and other benefits for companies establishing operations. Additionally, the country's EU membership ensures adherence to high standards of trade regulation, further bolstering investor confidence.

Sector-Specific Opportunities

Poland's economic diversification offers sector-specific investment opportunities:

- Technology and Innovation: With a burgeoning startup ecosystem and government-backed innovation hubs, Poland is becoming a regional tech powerhouse. Areas such as fintech, artificial intelligence, and cybersecurity present exciting prospects.
- Renewable Energy: Poland's commitment to green energy transitions, including wind and solar power, opens avenues for investment in sustainable projects and infrastructure.

- Manufacturing: The country's strong industrial base, particularly in automotive, aerospace, and electronics, makes it a manufacturing hub for global corporations.

- Real Estate: Urbanization and economic growth drive demand for residential, commercial, and industrial properties, offering lucrative opportunities in real estate development.

Cultural and Political Stability

Poland's rich cultural heritage and stable political environment enhance its appeal to international investors. The government's proactive approach to fostering bilateral trade and investment relations strengthens its position as a trusted partner on the global stage.

For businesses seeking to establish a presence in Europe, Poland stands out as a gateway to unparalleled opportunities and long-term success.

Intime Design Architecture highlights design emphasis in global competition with innovative projects

Müjgan Bozdemir, the founder of Intime Design Architecture, known for its successful trajectory in exhibition stand projects, emphasizes the importance of presenting products and services to the market through unique designs and applications to excel in global competition. Bozdemir pointed out that companies participating in niche fairs need innovative ideas that best convey their identity and vision, urging the industry and young architects to focus more on this field.

Highlighting the significant investments and initiatives by Turkish companies to reach global markets, Bozdemir stated that architectural design and applications play a critical role in realizing the potential. She shared that the stand design and implementation they built for Lens Medikal at the Silmo Istanbul Optical Fair last month won an award. “The fact that the stand we designed and implemented was chosen among the participating companies is, of course, a great source of happiness for us. I sincerely thank the jury members, our project site coordinator, project manager, production planning officer, craftsmen, and all our team members who worked diligently on this project. It was truly gratifying for such a labor-intensive project to receive recognition. This award is highly meaningful not only for us but also for our industry, as it symbolizes the appreciation of human talents and imagination. At Intime Design, we view exhibition stands as signatures of a company’s prestige and reputation management. We take great care in ensuring that our partners are represented in the best possible way. The harmony we make draws interest, translates into sales, and ultimately benefits our clients. This symbiotic relationship, where companies allocate significant budgets for stands and sector contributors like us thrive, is our greatest pride,” she said.

The Difference Lies in Experience and Teamwork

Bozdemir emphasized that Intime Design is built on 25 years of experience: “Even today, we are excited about the projects we can pursue. We have a young and dynamic team, and their enthusiasm fills me with pride for both our company and our country. After winning the 'Largest Stand' award at the 2010 Travel Türkiye Fair, I said, 'Success in architectural design is not just about winning awards but also about excelling in process management.' Remaining true to this principle, we won the 'Best Stand' award at the 2015 Emitt Istanbul Fair, the 'Best Stand Design' award at the 2020 Modeko Fair, and now this latest award further strengthens our position in the industry. At the core of architectural design lies the ability to best represent our clients. Our commitment to excellence grows stronger with every award and completed project,” she remarked.

The Importance of Reputation Management

Bozdemir underlined that Turkish companies are making significant investments to enter global markets, and architectural design and implementation are crucial in unlocking their potential. She noted that companies participating in niche fairs should focus not only on their products and services but also on visual communication and marketing strategies. “In today’s economies, especially in highly competitive sectors, it’s essential to convey your vision, quality, and expertise in a lasting way. The most effective way to achieve this visually is by integrating stand design with goal-oriented and impactful architectural applications. Ultimately, the distinguishing factor is capturing the attention of potential customers and presenting the product in an understandable manner,” she explained.

Architectural Design as a Key Factor

Bozdemir emphasized that presenting products and services effectively can yield long-term gains for businesses: “As an experienced interior architect, I believe that the industry representatives and young architects focusing on this area will contribute significantly to Türkiye’s economy and urban development. Ultimately, we live in a cyclical system. Designs in production and marketing require serious effort and collaboration. This produces a chain where everyone benefits, with architectural design serving as a powerful link that leaves a lasting impact,” she concluded.

Green Transformation in the Textile Industry

The green transformation in the textile industry marks a pivotal shift toward sustainable practices, aiming to minimize environmental impacts while embracing eco-friendly production methods. This evolution is steering the industry toward a future where sustainability and innovation go hand in hand.

Historically criticized for its significant ecological footprint, the textile sector is now adopting a comprehensive approach to address environmental challenges. This transformation includes the use of sustainable materials, energy efficiency measures, water conservation strategies, circular economy principles, and ethical production practices. Both producers and consumers have critical roles in driving these changes, fostering a more sustainable and livable planet. Here are the key pillars of this green transformation:

1. Embracing Sustainable Materials

Sustainable materials form the foundation of the green transformation. From recycled polyester to organic cotton and bamboo, these alternatives help preserve natural resources and minimize waste.

- Recycled Fabrics: Made from waste materials such as plastic bottles and discarded textiles, these fabrics reduce resource consumption and enhance waste management.

- Organic Cotton: Cultivated without harmful pesticides or chemical fertilizers, organic cotton supports soil and water health.

2. Advancing Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy

Energy-intensive production processes are undergoing a transformation to become more sustainable, focusing on energy efficiency and renewable energy adoption.

- Energy-Efficient Machinery: Modern equipment is designed to consume less energy while optimizing production workflows.

- Renewable Energy Solutions: Factories are increasingly turning to solar panels, wind turbines, and other renewable sources to meet their energy demands.

3. Promoting Water Conservation and Waste Management

Water is a critical resource in textile production, often consumed in large quantities and paired with chemicals. The green transformation introduces innovative approaches to conserve water and manage waste.

- Water Recycling Systems: Advanced systems purify and reuse water, significantly reducing overall consumption.

- Eco-Friendly Chemicals: Sustainable dyes and chemicals mitigate the risk of water pollution and protect ecosystems.

4. Implementing Circular Economy Practices

The circular economy focuses on extending product life cycles and boosting recycling efforts to minimize waste and resource depletion.

- Fabric Recycling: Old garments and textiles are repurposed to create new products, reducing waste.

- Repair and Refurbishment: Promoting repair services and refurbishing clothing extends product lifespans, curbing excessive waste.

5. Ensuring Transparency and Ethical Production

Consumers increasingly demand accountability and transparency in production processes. In response, companies are adopting ethical practices and providing clear information about their products' environmental impact.

- Sustainability Certifications: Certifications and eco-labels offer consumers insights into a product's environmental credentials.

- Transparent Supply Chains: Companies are enhancing visibility in their supply chains to build trust and align with consumer expectations.

The green transformation is redefining the textile industry, combining innovation with sustainability. As companies and consumers embrace these changes, the sector is moving toward a greener, more ethical future that prioritizes the health of the planet and the well-being of future generations.
